Norms
with Nadine Richards
1. Practice and Promote Psychological Safety: This is a safe forum to speak your truth; Say it kindly. "Masks" are not needed here; your authentic self is welcomed.

2. Speak Out and Call In: Every voice is valued! This includes unique and diverse thoughts, accents, languages, and ideas. Welcome ideological conflict; disagree with dignity and respect.

3. Listen with Intention to Learn and Unlearn: Open Mind, Open Heart, Open Will; Listen for Understanding; Practice suspending judgement and avoid defensiveness.

4. Practice Inquiry: Adopt a Learning Stance: Seek first to understand, rather than persuade.

5. Examine Privilege: Consider Bias: Be open to examine our privileges and our biases, be open to discomfort. Good intentions can masquerade as injustices. Distinguish intent from impact.

6. Stay Brave: Interact, participate, and engage.

   Stems and ‘invitations’ that can help:
   - What you said made me feel this way because …
   - I have not had that experience...or ....My experience may be different
   - Knowing that we may have had very different experiences...can you share more....?
   - So what I’m hearing you say . . .

2. Speak Out and Call In: Every voice is valued! This includes unique and diverse thoughts, accents, languages, and ideas. Welcome ideological conflict; disagree with dignity and respect.

   Stems and ‘invitations’ that can help:
   - Use "YES and...”
   - Who else has a different idea?
   - The way I am thinking is.....
   - I see it differently; The way I see it is....
   - Has everyone had a chance to share?
   - I’d like to take a moment to go back to something I just heard . . .
   - Does anyone have a different experience? Different opinion?
3. Listen with Intention to Learn and Unlearn: Open Mind, Open Heart, Open Will; Listen for Understanding; Practice suspending judgement and avoid defensiveness.

   Stems and ‘invitations’ that can help:
   - Tell me more....
   - What else?
   - What might I (we) not be seeing?
   - I disagree with your idea and....
   - I may need to know more
   - I’d like to unpack that . . .

4. Practice Inquiry: Adopt a Learning Stance: Seek first to understand, rather than persuade.

   Stems and ‘invitations’ that can help:
   - I would like some more “think” time; Please tell me more...
   - Let me see if I’ve got this right, you are saying that ________.
   - I learned from you________
   - Will you please repeat that idea?
5. Examine Privilege; Consider Bias: Be open to examine our privileges and our biases, be open to discomfort. Good intentions can masquerade as injustices. Distinguish intent from impact.

   Stems and ‘invitations’ that can help:
   - It seems to me that...
   - I am learning (unlearning) that...
   - I used to think________ and now I think________
   - I am uncomfortable; let’s start there...
   - Let’s speak about impact. The impact of your statements hurts. Words and behaviors have impact, and therefore we must speak out and name them especially when they are hurtful. We need to account (accountability) and restore (practice restorative justice protocols).

6. Stay Brave: Interact, participate, and engage.

   Stems and ‘invitations’ that can help:
   - I hear what you’re saying, but I believe
   - Yes, that is true, but it is also true that__________________.
   - What you said made me feel this way because ...
   - What I’d like you (us) to consider ...
   - The reason I am sharing more with you is because ...
   - I’d like to take a moment to go back to something I just heard . . .
   - I am uncomfortable with what was just stated

RECOMMENDATIONS
None of these efforts will endure and lead to transformative change unless strong accountability measures are developed and implemented that monitor both progress and setbacks and elicit feedback from aspiring leaders. At the recruiting agency and school levels, such accountability would include systematically tracking their leadership pipelines, surveying candidates who have applied for positions through their services or at their schools, and monitoring promotion, retention and length of tenure data. Other organizations, such as accreditation agencies and regional associations should consider how they might use their broad platforms to develop baselines and/or standards for their constituents to assess their policies and practices. While international educators have begun to recognize that racism and misogyny like predatory behaviors harm children, unlike for child protection, there is no centralized organization for reporting such behaviors and seeking legal, mental health and other SUPPORT.
One of the important ways to address traditional blind spots, broaden recruiter perspectives, and ensure that equitable recruitment becomes and remains a commitment is to ensure that recruiters, at both the agency and school level, better reflect the diversity of students who attend international schools. At the same time, organizations that offer mentorship, sponsorship and leadership development programs should be sure that aspiring leaders of all backgrounds are well represented in their programs.
In some countries, visa requirements may be an obstacle to equitable hiring. While we recognize that not all restrictions may be removed, we encourage schools and regional associations to work through the appropriate host country diplomatic and ministerial channels to see which restrictions could be eased to help international schools recruit educators who better reflect the diversity of their student communities.

A Holistic, Human-Centered Concept of Accountability

- Moves beyond goals, outcomes, KPIs and other statistics
- Emphasizes the people behind the numbers, that is the people most affected (and often most harmed) by unexamined organizational policies, practices and customs.
- Begin by asking yourself, who is the school ultimately accountable to (i.e. students)

Diversity Collaborative Case Studies

The Data Committee plans to produce a series of case studies during the 2021-2022 school year that highlight model DEIJ programs and approaches. The Committee has prioritized seven areas on which to focus the case studies. We would appreciate your nominating your own or other schools/organizations/programs that leaders with a commitment to DEIJ could learn from. Please share your suggestions, including a contact person with email address for each of your nominations. We appreciate your sharing your suggestions by Wednesday, May 12th, so we can collate them before the next data committee meeting. Thank you for your nominations!
