DEHONG HERITAGE

Dehong schools are Chinese at heart, offering a holistic and bilingual education leading to the IB diploma. Based on the academically rigorous Chinese national curriculum, Dehong schools have a strong focus on inquiry and conceptual understanding.

The sister school relationship with Dulwich College International schools gives Dehong students unique access to the One Family of Schools network. Students participate in group-wide events spanning the visual and performing arts (music, art, drama, film), sports, as well as leadership and community programmes. Furthermore, Dehong students benefit from group's academic research and development initiatives around enquiry-based learning, entrepreneurship, sustainability, the integration of technology and a world class university counselling programme. Dulwich College International schools have strong track records of sending students to Russell Group universities, including Oxbridge, as well as to the Ivy League and other leading universities around the world.

The name Dehong 德润 is made up from the elements of Dewei (the Chinese name of Dulwich) and 'the father of Chinese overseas students' Rong Hong (Yung Wing), who is also the first Chinese-born student to graduate from an American University, Yale University, in 1854.

Rong Hong had a dream. He wanted Chinese youths to study advanced technology to improve China's engineering and infrastructure. Upon his return to China, he became a strong advocate for the international education of Chinese students and was able to convince the authority to support his project by establishing the Chinese Educational Commission.

In all, 120 Chinese students relocated to New England, USA during the nine years that the programme was in operation. The programme is credited with providing China with her first generation of railroad builders, engineers, medical doctors, diplomats, college presidents and naval admirals, thus fulfilling, at least in part, the original vision of Rong Hong.

Not only was Rong Hong instrumental in establishing the Chinese Educational Commission and successfully running the programme as Deputy Commissioner for nine years, but he was also integral in bringing Chinese studies to Yale and re-establishing Chinese American relations following the close of the Commission.

LIVING IN XI'AN

Xi'an is an historic former ancient capital of the People's Republic of China. Famed as the start of the Silk Road and as home of the Terracotta Warriors. It is considered one of the cultural heartlands of China.

Over the five centuries of recorded human development in China, Xi'an has been the capital for five of the dynasties: the Western Zhou (1046–771BC), Qin (221–206BC), Western Han (206BC-220AD), Sui (581–605AD) and Tang (618-684AD). As such, present-day Xi'an is an expression of China's glorious historic past and vibrant modern development.

This is an immensely varied and interesting city with a rich history. This modern city has a population of over 12 million persons and is the commercial and cultural heart of the surrounding Shaanxi Province. Xi'an has historically been a cross-roads city, both within China, and for traders from across the Asian continent. As such, it provides a wide variety of architectural styles, historical sites, culinary tastes and lifestyle experiences. Xi'an is home to one of China's most prestigious natural history museums, providing insights into the ancient development of this region.

Xi'an enjoys a continental climate, with four distinct seasons. Winters are cold and dry, snow is expected, whilst summers are hot and can be humid. Autumn is the pleasantest season with cool temperatures and clear blue skies.

Dehong Xi'an School is located in Qujiang New District, in the southeast of Central Xi'an, in close proximity to the South Lake, and the Xi'an Ring Road providing easy access to the airport and major transport hubs. To the south of Qujiang New District are the QinLing Mountains, the mountain range that geographically divides North and South China.

The areas around our campus are largely residential, though there are many shops and restaurants nearby. The commercial heart of the Qujiang New District is close by and provides many opportunities for dining out, shopping and entertainment.

Today, EiM is a growing family of premier education brands, nurturing more than 11,000 students to Live Worldwide.
